Out Front and in the Shadows: The History of Antisemitism on University Campuses

Recent years have seen a disturbing rise of antisemitic incidents and antisemitic language throughout the U.S. This interdisciplinary panel explores the historical underpinnings of antisemitic tropes and images that have permeated a variety of contexts in higher education. Through an exploration of the history of these antisemitic ideas during the 1930s and 1940s, and their continuation in the years that followed, this discussion will address the ways in which these ideas still impact classroom contexts today.
