Mckay leads GU ministry

BY HENRY KRUEGER

While Gonzaga University was founded in the Jesuit tradition, it welcomes students, faculty and staff from all different faith backgrounds. This level of inclusivity is something Meredith McKay has observed directly as a theology undergraduate student in the class of 2015, a campus minister for over five years and the current interim co-director of University Ministry.

After being promoted to director of University Ministry in mid-February, McKay plans to adopt an approach that could be summed up by the phrase “people first. That helps us in understanding who the people matter at the end of the day what we’re trying to do if we meet them. “Part of our office’s responsibility is obviously about me is that I’m leaving in a year, so why would you have zero reason to trust me, and the only thing you know about me is that I’m really old, so I was barely older than the people I was driving in a 12-passenger van.

McKay said her time as a student and staff member at GSU has been highly integrated with professional work experience. “It’s part of the mission and identity, which aims to provide students with meaningful and diverse experiences. “Gonzaga’s is a deeply relational place,” McKay said. “I mean that very explicitly. And I’d want you to have feelings about terrorist activity, about just loss of life, “ said Provost Sacha Kopp. “There’s a lot going on, and we have feelings about terrorist activity, about just loss of life. “

McKay has led the school in a variety of ways, including campus ministry, academic support, and student transportation. She lived right across the Delaware River in Camden, New Jersey, where she regularly drove seven students to school in a 12-passenger van.

“Part of our office’s responsibility is obviously about the importance of this civil responsibility. “Don’t think your vote matters? Read OPINION.”

In response to a desire across campus to talk about the ongoing Israeli-Palestinian conflict, Gonzaga University’s Office of the Provost has spearheaded the development and hosting of a series of events in order to have conversations around the issue.

Community involvement is something Ben Wick and Danica Wick are not strangers to, as the Spokane Valley community news media organization owners often find themselves in the middle of community events and discussions.

The Wicks launched The West Plains Stream, a monthly newsmagazine that covers community stories in Airway Heights, Medical Lake, and the Fairchild Air Force Base, in February. They wanted to use the publication to connect the communities and tell the stories of residents.

Ben Wick said mailing the magazine is helpful for advertisers as it ensures that their advertisements are seen. However, printing The West Plains Stream in the hands of readers is not only to spotlight advertisers, but to connect the communities.

"It’s easily accessed that way and our mission statement is fostering communities and encouraging citizen involvement," Danica Wick said. "I think we direct mailing it and just putting out the news really is part of our mission statement of getting people involved. And you know, putting it in their hands is kind of the first step."

Every story found within The West Plains Stream is a community story, according to Danica Wick. "Whether it’s the Spokane Valley Residents Association or a local nonprofit, if the story has a direct tie to the Airway Heights and Medical Lake community, then we can find itself in the newsmagazine.

"We think those smaller local stories are what makes us and our community who we are," Danica Wick said. "There’s not getting the spotlight that others do, when they’re what’s makes us who we are, in a tragedy. So, that’s why we try to make sure one part of owning the newspaper is getting to tell those stories that aren’t being told elsewhere."

Ben Wick said, because both he and Danica are community involvement enthusiasts, they've wanted to create newswriting and publishing opportunities for those who want to write about their community.

"I was a homer, or an honorary homeowner, at Gonzaga University, in Spokane, Washington," Ben Wick said. "And then learning more about it, they discovered many things they probably got missing from the surrounding community." Ben Wick said.

"We ran out the first edition of the newsmagazine, people will be inspired to become active in the community."

Danica Wick said that she hopes to bridge this disconnect. She also said that The West Plains Stream's staff of writers has helped them to find stories that are "hyperlocal all by being connected to the community."

"It’s a lot of footwork really just being out there and being with the people in the community to find those stories that are going on there," Danica Wick said. "And that brings a great partner with the community so that they want to tell us and give us stories. I think that the best thing is, just to be receptive to somebody calling and saying, ‘Hey, I want to be involved in covering what’s going on.’"

"The community has already responded positively to the newsmagazine, according to Ben Wick, with more calls and email coming in than either of the Wicks’ other publications.

"Danica Wick said she hopes that with the spread of community news through the newsmagazine, people will be inspired to become active in their community."

"For me, as a mom, that’s what I want my kids’ heart to be … that’s just the beginning of our legacies," Danica Wick said. "It’s helping us live in a world where there’s so much disconnect and divide, sharing those local stories that bring people back together and kind of show them that civility, " Ben Wick said. "Because if we can have different perspectives, we can figure out how to work together and understand what’s going on."

Danica Wick said she hopes that with the spread of community news through the newsmagazine, people will be inspired to become active in their community."

"The importance of being civically-minded is that it’s the beginning of our community’s legacies," Danica Wick said. "For me, as a mom, that’s what I want my kids’ heart to be … that’s just the beginning of their being good people and our world being a good place, and I hope that our newspaper does that much of that in ways we’ve never seen.

"And being a great person, they would say, and being a good citizen, they would say, " Danica Wick said. "And that’s kind of why we keep being a good person and being a good citizen, they would say, " Danica Wick said. "And that’s kind of why we keep doing what we do, and we do it as a family."

"We’d love to kind of figure out the Cheney aspect, whether that fits into The West Plains Stream can be found on its website.

The series has included a variety of storytelling opportunities, such as personal stories, to provide a platform for voices that might not otherwise be heard. It has also included presentations from both present and past student leaders at the University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

Morgan, for example, will be the featured speaker for our spring Ignatian spirituality event, which will focus on the Jesuit charism. Meredith participates in Ignatian spiritual leaders of our area understand Ignatian spirituality and the nature of work and being a leader. "It's such a beautiful experience where people come together and share their stories and be something special." Meredith says she was really excited when she explored how composing her performance was personal and something that she was new to explore.

"My piece was about great, but it's also about passing on the torch," Tramble said.

Collecting moments of emotion was a large part of the planning for the diversity monolouge. "We were all trying to get into the Ignatian voice." Tramble. Through these pieces, she put together a story with the community.

"I've actually had this little notes app of things that I just put on and when I want to put this to put into this already, I had to have that gone through, you just need that. Let's just get take this and build off of this," Tramble said.

"I think that's everything," Belone said. "I think that for me as a student leader, you can share real and authentic stories from more than one could ask for."

Elected and informed voting is vital

By ANDREW SVENNINGSTROM

You’ve grabbed your first-ever sushi with chopsticks. It’s a salmon, half the size of the spoon you’re using. A few forkfuls later, you’re still feeling it. You send the rest of your sushi back to the chef. You aren’t going to waste a single bite.

As you walk up the stairs to the main hall, you notice that the music is getting louder and the lights are getting dimmer. You figure that’s probably because it’s movie time. You start to wonder if the movie will be a new Hollywood classic, or if it will be a foreign film that you’ve never heard of before.

The lights turn off and the screen turns on. The movie begins, and you realize that you’re completely absorbed in the story. You forget about the world around you and just focus on the characters on the screen. You laugh at the jokes, cry at the sad parts, and get emocional at the intense scenes.

The movie ends, and you’re left with a sense of satisfaction. You know that you just watched a great movie, and you’re already looking forward to the next one.

As you leave the theater, you notice that the temperature has dropped. You bundle up and head back to your dorm, looking forward to snuggling up with your favorite blanket and watching another movie on Netflix.

TikTok is a music streaming platform that allows users to upload and share music clips. It has gained popularity in recent years and has become a significant player in the music industry. TikTok has been estimated to have over 1 billion monthly active users, and it is projected to reach 2 billion by 2023. TikTok’s success is largely due to its user-friendly interface and the ability to create and share videos on the platform.

The platform has been credited with reshaping the music industry by giving a voice to emerging artists and giving listeners the ability to discover new music. TikTok has collaborated with record labels and artists to create opportunity for new talent.

Another gear item that can elevate an outdoor experience is a Crazy Creek, a foldable chair with a net that provides some back support while sitting. Crazy Creek’s newest model, the Kidz Crazy Creek, is also reasonably priced given the durability of the product, with most retailing for $45. For those interested in venturing further off the beaten path, having a good pair of shoes is essential for staying active and safe while hiking. To make sure you can stay on the trail and minimize potential blisters, it is important to ensure that you have a good-fitting pair of shoes and that you break in new shoes on shorter walks before attempting longer hikes. There’s a variety of hiking boots that are comfortable, durable, and affordable, with some costing well under $100.

For those interested in a lightweight, all-purpose option, trail running shoes are a good alternative to hiking boots that allow the wearer more freedom than the traditional, stiff hiking boot, while still having traction necessary for the trails. My favorite trial running shoes are the Brooks Cascadia, which are cushioned and supportive with great traction and a smooth ride, allowing for a fast and efficient run.

After the digital revolution in the late 2000s, both the creation and consumption of music under went tremendous changes.

Signing to a record label is no longer required to have your music heard. Artists can release music through shared digital libraries that allow anyone with an internet connection the potential to create, record, produce and publish their own music.

Additional ways music is different in the late 2000s is the medium of listening to music. From CDs in the 1980s to MP3s in the 2000s.

The digital revolution has led to tremendous changes.

- It's incredibly accessible.
- It's something that people can access anywhere and at any time.

Basket's best: Make your next picnic a walk in the park

Commentary by Hannah Brown

There are few things better than enjoying a meal with a view, but as college students, high-method lunch and mid-quarter snacks are seen as normal. In fact, getting delicious and sustaining food can be a challenge. College campuses, especially while you're living on campus, can leave you feeling frustrated, especially when you are trying to avoid overspending. You might find it difficult to find the experience is worth the investment.

It requires some more materials, but there is a way to picnic that is more sustainable. A great way to picnic is to cook outside. Better yet, have a cooking setup, dishware, but I promise you that you can cook up a delicious meal in a dorm kitchen. Better yet, take a walk or hike when you get back you can cook up something to eat right in the tail of your car.

If you're ready to make a little bit more of an excursion out of your meal, your favorite beverage to pair with picnic food is wine. It's a perfect pairing. However, if you're looking for a little more adventurous setup, you might want to make your own wine.

To make your own wine, you'll need a few simple ingredients:

- Grapes
- Sugar
- Yeast

Follow this recipe to make your own wine:

1. Crush the grapes and place them in a container.
2. Add sugar and yeast to the container.
3. Mix the ingredients together and let them sit for at least 1 week.
4. Strain the liquid and pour it into a bottle.
5. Seal the bottle and let it ferment for at least 2 weeks.
6. Serve your homemade wine and enjoy!

Curating a spread of your favorite snacks is perfect for picnicking in a transportable and sharable way. Even better, items like this often have many more affordable options. Gonzaga men's basketball finishes strong

Zags bounce back late in season plagued by setbacks with notable wins

COMMENTARY
BY ZACH WHITE

In a season filled with both highs and crushing lows, Gonzaga University's men's basketball team was able to band together to achieve most of its goals, despite encountering numerous obstacles.

Last Friday, the Zags came up short in Detroit against No. 6-seeded Providence College but the next night in Chicago, the Zags defeated No. 16-seeded Missouri State in a first-round NCAA Tournament game. This was a great win for the Zags, as they had been on a downswing for much of the season, but it was not enough to carry them all the way to the Final Four.

In this season, the Zags were ranked No. 4 in the Associated Press Top 25 poll, No. 9 in the coaches' poll, and No. 13 in the NET. They ended the season ranked No. 13 in the coaches' poll and No. 18 in the NET.

Gonzaga forward Yvonne Ejim was named the 2024 Becky Hammon Player of the Year. Even though she was not a candidate for the award, she was still able to achieve her goal of becoming a WNBA star, which she accomplished in the 2023-24 season.

Ejim is already ranked sixth in points (1,659), with 32 wins, 32 double-doubles over the course of the season, 15 double-doubles over the course of the season, and a perfect West Coast Conference regular season.

In the all-Bulldog clash, five Zags scored in double figures, with Ejim leading the way with 22 points and seven rebounds. She showed her real character and competed and got even closer instead of pulling apart. 14 points. The announcement adds another dimension to the 2023-24 roster, with the team poised to make another deep March Madness run in the upcoming season.

Though GU ultimately fell to Purdue in the second weekend of the tournament, the 2023-24 season featured many successes. The Zags ended the season ranked 13th in the coaches' poll and 18th in the NET.

The award recognizes the best mid-major player at the end of the season.

Ejim played a key role in the Zags' NCAA Tournament run. He was a key figure in the team's 79-73 win over No. 13-seeded Missouri State in the first round.

Ejim announced that she will return to Gonzaga for her senior season. She is already ranked sixth in points (1,659), with 32 wins, 32 double-doubles over the course of the season, 15 double-doubles over the course of the season, and a perfect West Coast Conference regular season.

This season, the Zags earned a program-high 26 conference wins, becoming the first mid-major to earn one of the top 16 seeds in the tournament and a chance to face the tournament's No. 1 seed, the Kentucky Wildcats.

The Zags' NCAA Tournament run came to an end in the Sweet 16 with a loss to No. 1-seeded Michigan State in the second round.

This season, Ejim was named WCC Player of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year. She was also named WCC Player of the Week four times this season.

The program and the city of Spokane said goodbye to one of its own, as Eaton left his family and all of the Gonzaga community after leading the Zags to their first NCAA Tournament appearance in 14 years.

“Becky Hammon is a heroic figure for all of us,” Eaton said. “I enjoyed the season with my coaches, my team, my family and all of our fans.”

I am sure all of us here here on this team and it’s been a special year for us. It’s a difficult time but I love you all. This is just a moment for power, but I know we’ve got a long road ahead of us. I think the fans and everyone here on this team and it’s been a special year for us.

Most of the 2023-24 roster, with the team poised to make another deep March Madness run in the upcoming season. The Zags ranked in the top 16 games of the season, after shooting 31.7% in its March Madness run.

The Zags ended the season ranked 13th in the coaches' poll and 18th in the NET.
